

About Us
Appeal To UGC
Archive
Call For Submissions
Contact Us
Editorial Board
FAQ
Publication Ethics
Special Issue
Submission

Visitors

623426

Asphyxia

Articles

Asphyxia

Diksha B Kadam

Assistant Professor in English

MIT Arts Commerce and Science College Alandi (D) Pune

One day they said

I am not Allowed 'OPEN UP'

Shut my mouth and brain too

No answer, as they were readymade without efforts

Allowing myself to the congested broadness of them

Where I overcome my so called fear

By not asking question then after

Ugliness of my covered thoughts

It was their triumph

So called girth allowing me now

To be among them

Yesterday I dreamt of my

Being out and spreading my wings as per my wishes

My sky soon finished and I fell on the earth again Amidst

Sorry, the comment form is closed at this time.

Site Map

- About Us
- Appeal to UGC
- Archive
- Become Reviewer
- Call For Submissions
- Contact Us
- Current Issue
- Editorial Board
- FAQ
- Feedback
- Publication Ethics
- Special Issue
- Submission

License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License.

Feedback

Your Name (required)

Your Email (required)

Subject

Your Message

The Criterion's Fan Page on Facebook

The Criterion: An International journal in English

Untitled – III
Are there Takers?

© 2010-2017 Research Center for English Language and Literature
Designed & Maintained by Dr. Vishwanath Bite
Suffusion theme by Sayontan Sinha