

INSTITUTIONAL BUILDING & ROLE OF INSTITUTIONS IN A MODERN SOCIETY

Deepak Ranjan Sahoo

Assistant Professor

Department of Arts & Commerce

MIT Arts Commerce & Science College, Alandi (D), Pune.

Email-Sahoo.depu09@gmail.com.drsahoo@mitacsc.ac.in

Mob no-8087583049

Abstract :

If one goes through history of great society & nations are the result of contribution by various institutions to the advancement of society. An institution is a live body & major, consignments of the society, which works for its own development as well as development of the society. The success or failure of nation depends on success or failure of its associated institutions. Hence, it's become useful to study the growth and development of modern Society and its sustainable development through the institutional building.

Key words: Institutional Building, Excellence & Institutional Excellence.

Introduction:

The concept of Institutional Building is not new source of civilisation. Institutional Building has been considering a major aspect of building of a society. No society can grow its fundamental institutions are well establish every society try to build its basic organ and consider their building blocks of social development. If a society tries to grow and expand because of effort made institution than any by particular individual sustainability, perpetuity are the major features of a sound institution. The key elements of Institutional building are as follows:

